The migration of the settlers in Leutze's composition is from right to left, that is, from East to West. Two figures—one standing, another still climbing—appear on a rocky outcropping in the middle of the painting, and the wagon train of pioneers can be seen near the right most edge. This caravan approaches the edge of the picture plain in the central part of the painting, before moving ...

An important concern in immigration research involves the effects of immigration and assimilation on health, education, and social programs, particularly in areas of high immigration concentration. Much folk wisdom has viewed assimilation as a linear process of progressive improvement and adjustment to American society. The general assumption is guided by an implicit deficit model: to advance ...
