Are international organizations using the issue of poverty reduction as a new way to approach global governmentality? This article recognizes that serious problems are involved in so approaching the idea of global governmentality, given the lack of success these strategies have. It is suggested here that such strategies operate not to improve the condition of populations but as a means for ...

Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 1 calls for 'ending poverty in all its forms everywhere'. Labour migration can help achieve this goal, having been described as 'the most effective contribution we can make to improving the lives of the world's working poor' (Rodrik, 2007). In this briefing, we show that international labour migration is a powerful tool to reduce poverty, for ...

recognized much early in development that not all Batswana could benefit from employment and other productive endeavors. Like most countries Botswana did not attempt to put into place strategies for poverty reduction as it was assumed that growth will automatically trickle down to the poor and poverty will be taken care of. Experience of the last 4 decades has been rich with experience for the ...

It demonstrates that the greening of economies is not generally a drag on growth but rather a new engine of growth; that it is a net generator of decent jobs, and that it is also a vital strategy for the elimination of persistent poverty. The report also seeks to motivate policy makers to create the enabling conditions for increased investments in a transition to a green economy.
