It is by Maurice Merleau-Ponty; it is a full exposition of his philosophy at this stage of his career; and Taylor Carman's contribution to this English translation is one of three introductory essays for English readers. For now, all I can say is: if you want one of the principal contributions to the development of post-Husserlian phenomenology, and of C20 philosophy outside the Anglo-American ...

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia Phenomenology of Perception (French: Phénoménologie de la perception) is a 1945 book about perception by the French philosopher Maurice Merleau-Ponty, in which the author expounds his thesis of "the primacy of perception".

Phenomenology of Perception - Maurice Merleau-Ponty ...

In his investigation of the Phenomenology of Perception(1945), Maurice Merleau-Ponty defines phenomenology as the study of essences, including the essence of perception and of consciousness. He also says, however, that phenomenology is a method of describing the nature of our perceptual contact with the world.

Merleau-Ponty is, for me, the best writer in phenomenology since Husserl, who created the damned thing. While Phenomenology of Perception is clearly a product of its time, and the available psychology, the amount of interesting work that Merleau-Ponty is able to do in what is essentially proto-cognitive science is very impressive. His work is carried forward in the writing of Alva Noë and ...

The Phenomenology of Perception was Merleau-Ponty's second work and lays the foundation for his later writings. What Merleau-Ponty attempts to do in this work is to take phenomenology away from the idealist and dualistic tracks of Husserl and Sartre and ground it firmly in ontology through a psychological analysis of perception. In doing so, Merleau-Ponty lays the foundations for Structuralism ...
